1. Guess the Location in the United States

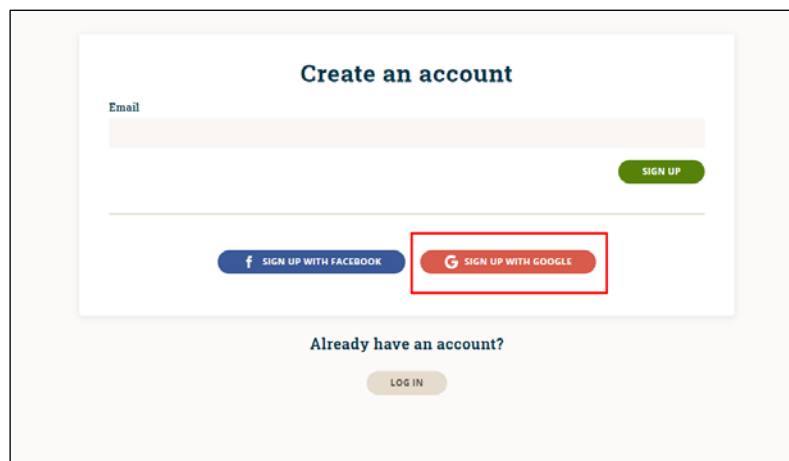

Instructions:

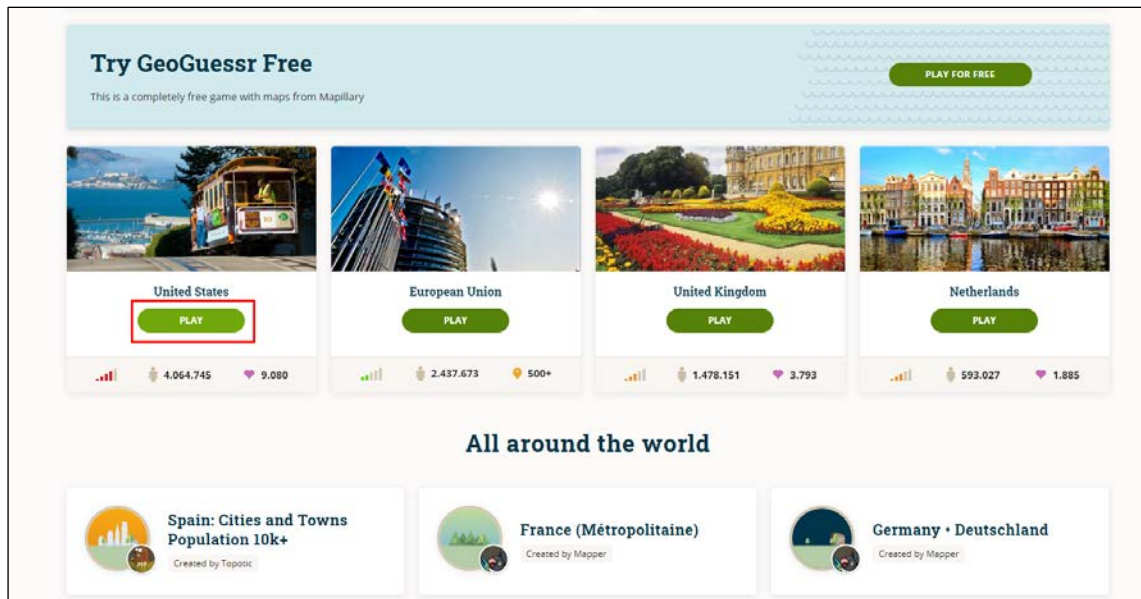

Go to the GeoGuessr website using the link. (<https://www.geoguessr.com/>)

This is guessing-game website which shows you pictures from around the world, and you have to guess where they are from. There are several different settings – “World” takes you to random places around the world, “Famous Places” only takes you to the most well-known places around the world, “European Union” takes you to places inside the economic block, and so on.

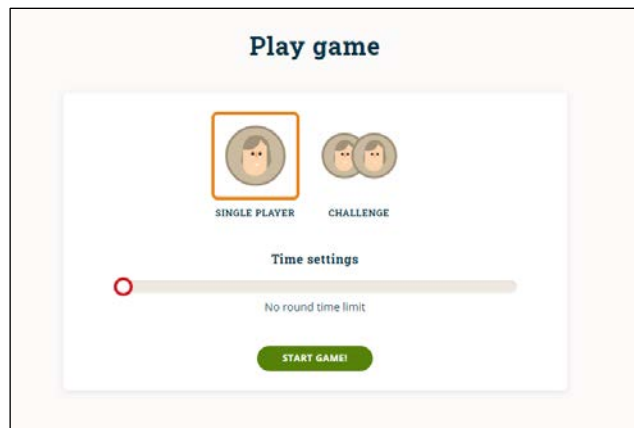

You can easily create an account using a Google e-mail address, like I've done. You could also use your Facebook account.

We'll play the United States game in this activity, but you can feel free to play any other on your own. You can only play one game each day for free, so choose wisely.

When you pick your game, it will ask if you're playing solo or against a challenger. I've picked single player for this activity, but you can play with friends later. Sliding the "Time settings" bar will determine a certain time limit for each round.

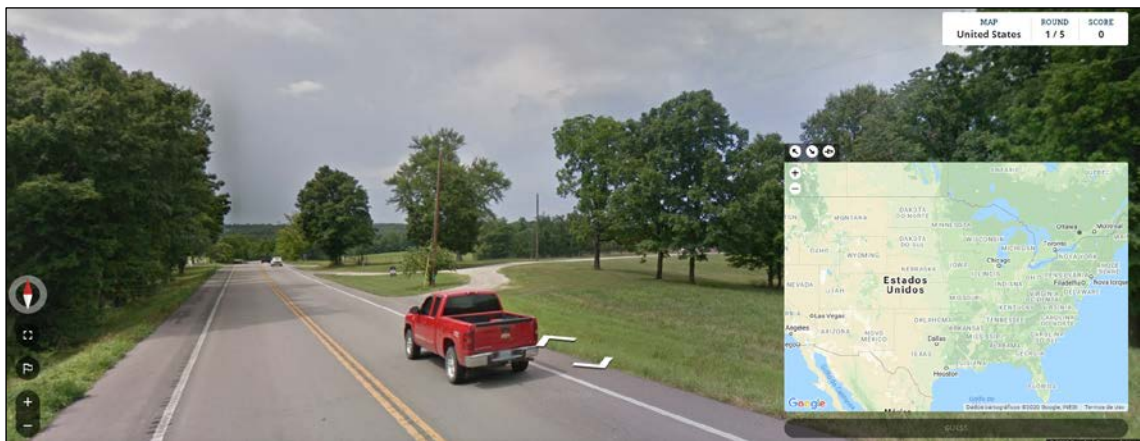

Look at the pictures and guess the location! We will only care about the State, no need to guess the name of the city. My answers and the correct ones will be at the end of the activity.

In order to help you get to know each US state and recognize them, use the following link to read a little about some of them. (<https://www.infoplease.com/us/states>)

To answer the location in the website, you'll have to open that World Map on the bottom-right and put a pin on the spot you want to guess. You can zoom in and out with the mouse in order to find and choose more precisely.
